Valerie Colber, MBA, PMP, SCPM, began her professional career over 30 years ago as an information technology professional gaining valuable experience in different positions on projects prior to becoming a highly successful professional project manager for 20+ years, and managing all kinds of large and complex projects, in many different industries from engineering, to health care, to insurance, to financial, to public utility, to the semi-conductor industry.

Valerie Colber completed the requirements of the Stanford Advanced Project Management (SAPM) program to become a Stanford Certified Project Manager (SCPM). She joined an elite group of over 500 professionals and executives worldwide who have received this credential to date.

The projects, program of projects, and portfolio of projects that Valerie has managed over the years have not only been recognized on a corporate level, winning several company and executive awards, but also at the industry level with one program of world-wide projects winning an industry award.

Valerie Colber is an active consultant and professor, both in the corporate world, and adjunct faculty member at Diablo Valley College since 1999, teaching popular courses in computer science, project management, and advanced project management. The PMI PMP certification exam course she developed has been most successful at helping project managers, functional and senior managers, executives, and technical leads successfully achieve their PMI PMP certification, and learn how to apply these project management best practices on the job today. The advanced project management overview course she developed was also highly rated at Diablo Valley College, as well as her one day advanced project management topic workshops.

Bright Ideas and Concepts is a project management consulting and professional development firm, offering reasonably priced, valuable professional development opportunities, helping companies evaluate and improve their project management practices, locate experienced resources, and narrow the gap between business reality and the application of best project management practices, to consistently complete projects successfully on time, within budget and scope, and to take their project management to the next level. The Supplier Clearinghouse for the Utility Supplier Diversity Program of the California Public Utilities Commission certified that it has audited and verified the eligibility of Bright Ideas and Concepts of Moraga, CA as a WBE pursuant to Commission General Order 156.
